Submitted for your approval the rarest of photos, President Marshall at a real podium, at a real meeting. It only took 49 weeks into his term but still good to see. A few random shots of attendees, where our photographer has to get back into form after a year off. On the good, happy side in lower right Leslie going off to her prom with proud grandfather by her side. Have fun be safe poppi moiph

-Al Temkin is hosting an after-party at 12pm on 6/12 after the 100k bike ride
-Brian Murphy thanked for the help with gardening
-Brian Murphy said to respond to his roster book email
-Sue Gabriel thanked everyone involved in the scavenger hunt
-Eric Immerman needs help at bootstraps handing out food at 12pm this Saturday

Impact Magazine: Dave Olson, Al Temkin, Tom Alexander, Andrew DeFranza

Speaker:

Dr. Tanyss Munro has spent her life, with her husband, best-selling author Gem Munro, to improve educational opportunities for vulnerable children and youth around the world. As director of education with troubled native communities in remote and northern Canada, the senior youth became catalysts of remarkable change in their school and community. From there she became a senior advisor to Regional Tribal governments and Federal Ministers. The Munros founded Amarok Society in response to the education crisis where one in three children is growing up illiterate. Clearly, a novel approach was needed - and they opened their first novel school in 2006.

Sergeant: Bill Beckman

Back in the saddle again
Fined Connor Mooney for going to ladies night
Fined Jackie for having Bob Ross hair in her zoom picture

Happy Dollars:

-Brian Murphy for Beckman being lousy

Raffle

Bill Scanlon had winning ticket but didn't draw the joker card

-Marshall Handly for us all being there (Chris Haight joined in)

-Sue Gabriel thanked everyone for the scavenger hunt work

Meeting adjourned at 1:45
Submitted by Connor Mooney

-Rick Mooney for his 33rd anniversary

The Munros founded Amarak Society in response to the education crisis where one in three children is growing up illiterate. Clearly, a novel approach was needed - and they opened their first novel school in 2006. Due to technical difficulties and bad camera angles we couldn't get a good photo of the laptop computer. But with stalking technology we were able to get the good Dr's photo off the internet. All good in the world.

Worldwide Adventures of Handly

I was walking down the Ginza in Tokyo in the fall of 81', I was looking for a Fugu bar to challenge my bravery or stupidity. (Fugu is a delicacy across Japan, but the tetrodotoxin found in the fish is more toxic than cyanide) I found my quarry at a local place called Miyagi's. As I saddled up to the Fugu bar I was surprised to discover Noriyuki "Pat" Morita was the Fugu master chef. Karate Kid just came out and I was intrigued by the wax on wax off method of training. "Pat" reminded me he was an actor not a trained Karate master. He said if you look closely all his stunts are close ups and he didn't perform his own stunts. Nevertheless he served me copious amounts of Fugu and perhaps one or two gave me a euphoric state of mind. I found myself at the base of Mt. Fuji in a hot spring with Snow Monkeys. Turns out the family of snow monkeys were also trained lawyers. We conversed in their native tongue (may have been aided by Fugu) about many topics. Myth of Godzilla, Hatari Hanso Swords, and benefits of salt throwing at Sumo matches. A young group of men asked if they could join us. Turns out it was KPOP band Bangton Boys. We sang various hits of theirs and it turned out the Midori, a Snow Monkey with a soprano voice impressed the group so much they asked her to join on their tour. Perhaps it was the warm water or stimulating conversation but I dozed off. I was gently being shook and opened eyes to see Pat saying "Marshall san are you okay?" I paid Pat the $250 yen for a delightful dinner and walked outside. A buzz of paparazzi was surrounding what looked like a snow monkey in sunglasses. Was it a dream?
