The Speaker for the week: This week we had two reclassification speeches.

Dianne Palter Gill was born into a household filled with music and communication. Her mother owned a retail store and Dianne wouldn't take "no" as an answer as a very young sales girl. She told us of regular evenings of political debate around the living room late into the evening that set the foundation for her passion for social justice. She has 3 kids that we may or may not have heard about. Each of her children and grandchildren are musically inclined.

Tom Chatellier is also musically inclined. His high school rock band, Bon Jovi, still gets together annually in NJ to bang out the tunes. He was an athlete in high school and college, playing soccer and wrestling. In college Tom coined the phrase "if you ain't cheatin', you ain't tryin'". Tom had a long career in banking in big banks and smaller trust companies. Tom loves spending time with his daughter and grandkids.
